

David Hockney

Born in Bradford in 1937, Hockney was one of the big artists involved in the pop art movement in the 1960s. Pop art was a style of art that was bright, full of colour. Young artists who felt that the art they saw in galleries was a little bit boring created this. Hockney lives in London, but owns two other homes in California. California and the UK are very different places. California is usually always sunny, where as in England the weather changes all the time. So, when painting in England, Hockney likes to paint the seasons.

Foreground, middle ground and background

The foreground is what you see at front of the painting. The middle ground is what you see in the middle, and the background, is what lies behind something.

A landscape painting captures natural scenery and beauty such as mountains, hills, rivers and fields.

The horizon line show where earth meets the sky.

Perspective

- Things in the foreground are bigger than things in the background.
- If we want something to be in the background, we need to make it smaller, to make it look like it is far away.
- Look at these trees. The smaller ones are farther away and the larger ones are in the foreground.

Vocabulary.

Low contrasting colours,	Colours next to each other on the colour wheel.
High contrasting colours.	Colours opposite sides of the colour wheel.
Vibrant	Bright and strong.
Perspective	The art of representing three-dimensional objects on a two-dimensional surface so as to give the right impression of their height, width, depth, and position in relation to each other.

